Reader's Guide

What this volume is

This is a companion to the Primary Source Reader and the monograph-based Secondary Source Reader. It collects journal-article scholarship as a distinct source type: shorter, focused interventions in historical debates, methods, and evidence.

How selections were made

The reader includes every unique article in the supplied collection, organized by the Unit 3 chapter it most directly supports. Chapter-coded labels make the evidence easy to locate and distinguish from primary-source and monograph-reader numbering.

Facsimile excerpts

Citing these readings

Use the full footnote citation the first time you cite an article and the shortened form thereafter. Cite the original journal pages shown on the facsimile, not reader page numbers. Create your own footnote numbering. If an article quotes a primary document that you did not consult separately, use a quoted-in note. Include only works you actually use in your bibliography.

Access

Stable JSTOR links identify the supplied articles. Access may require the Bakersfield College library login. The source PDFs remain in the Scholarly Articles folder for reading beyond the excerpt.
